Who should attend:

Telecommunicators, Telecommunication Supervisors and others who are assigned call-taker duties.

Description:

Due to their unique position, telecommunicators are inundated with constant stress, often without an effective way to release it. The accumulation of stress can lead to burn-out, apathy, increased sick-time or at its peak the on-set of PTSD. The question is how to provide a coping strategy for the tele-communicator to effectively negate the effects of stress? The answer is with Emotional Intelligence.

The practice of Emotional Intelligence through the process of mindfulness provides the tele-communicator with strategies to deal with chronic stress accumulation. Mindfulness is the practical application of self-awareness, self-management, and social awareness; in short, developing mindfulness means developing emotional intelligence.

This engaging workshop provides the tele-communicator with strategies to combat stress, reduce burn-out, re-ignite their "why" and increase their emotional intelligence competencies.

Attendees will leave this class with an actionable plan for relieving job stressors by learning:

- The 5 Pillars of Emotional Intelligence
- Understand the concept of Emotional Contagion
- Identify their individual stress point
- Understand the difference between reacting and responding
- Identifying when tap-out moments should happen
- Why having a pause button is important
- Understand the difference between fixed and growth mindset
- A personal strategy for stress reduction and increasing resiliency
